

Graduate Parliamentary Service Officer Testimonial

TRANSCRIPT

Grace

Hi. My name is Grace, and I studied a Bachelor of Creative Industries and majored in two forms of communication.

I didn't have a dream career in mind, but I knew that I wanted my work to help people and to make a positive difference.

I remember seeing the advertisement for the Queensland Parliamentary Service Graduate Program on the day of closing and I immediately applied.

The more I looked, the more I thought about how this would be an amazing opportunity to work for an organisation that had similar values to me regarding innovation and diversity.

I started in the Information Services part of the Parliamentary Service and quickly discovered how much work goes behind the scenes by the staff to support Queensland Parliament.

I found myself surrounded by amazing and supportive people with such a variety of knowledge and different skill sets.

I got to work alongside Librarians, the Education, Communication and IT teams.

The Queensland Parliamentary Service strives to embrace new ideas and opportunities and to promote the diversity of people and thought.

These values are important to me because I feel like the work I'm doing here is very meaningful.

Some of the projects I've already worked on directly support Parliament to fulfill its democratic functions.

I highly recommend this program to graduates from any and all streams, but I particularly want to emphasize this to graduates who are like me.

This graduate program is perfect for those who aren't sure what they want to do after university, but know they want to be a positive agent of change.

To discuss the role, please contact our team at graduates@parliament.qld.gov.au.

First Nations applicants can also contact our First Peoples' Liaison Officer, Beryl Friday, or current Graduate Parliamentary Service Officer, Sheree Strauss, at graduates@parliament.qld.gov.au.

www.parliament.qld.gov.au

